 Summary table
 Base: All respondents (who follow any religion)

	Religious extremism poses a threat to British society	In Britain today, religion and law should be kept strictly separate	I think of myself as being British just as much as I identify with my chosen religious faith	I am content with the way my religion tends to be portrayed in the media	The UK is a place where I feel completely free to practice my religious beliefs without fear or intimidation	I have learned what I know about my religion mainly through self- study as an adult, rather than through other means such as family tradition
